

In Liu lab, we are interested in integrating Chemistry and Engineering approaches to study the immune system. Therapeutic manipulation of the immune system is of great interest due to the pervasive role of immunity in health and disease. Chemistry and Engineering can play important roles in the rational design and optimization of molecules that impact on the immune system.